Because of you.

Every single day, DeliverFund tracks, analyzes, and unmasks 141,456 online images, 31,299 sex ads, 30,326 phone numbers, 8,271 emails, and 3,541 videos.

This is the trail every predator and trafficker leaves. Every minute...149 digital footprints. We follow every one.

9,000

In 2025, we crossed this milestone for the number law enforcement using our technology, training, and advisement across the country.

All funded by you.

A Message From Our Founders

Thank you for standing with us.

More than a decade ago, DeliverFund was founded with a clear purpose: to equip law enforcement with the intelligence needed to dismantle human trafficking networks. Today, more than 9,000 officers across 1,200 agencies use the technology and intelligence you helped build to identify victims, strengthen investigations, and hold traffickers accountable.

In 2025, exploitation continued to evolve, but so did we. We expanded our technology, strengthened partnerships, and trained more intelligence professionals, giving investigators capabilities once reserved for national security operations. The numbers in this report represent more than data. Every statistic reflects a life impacted, a victim given hope, or an investigation moved forward. Many of those whose lives are changed will never know who made it possible.

We do. It was you.

Your support is more than a donation; it is an operational force that helps law enforcement protect the vulnerable every day. Thank you for believing in this mission. Together, we will not stop until every child is free from exploitation.

HOW THE SMARTPHONE
CHANGED EVERYTHING

Smartphones didn't create child trafficking, they digitized it. What required physical proximity can now happen anywhere, anytime, through a device in our pocket.

2007 THE SMARTPHONE ERA BEGINS
Apple introduces the iPhone, putting internet access into millions of hands.

2010 HUMAN TRAFFICKING MOVES ONLINE
Smartphone adoption accelerates as traffickers shift recruitment and advertising to digital platforms.

2011 INSTAGRAM & MOBILE SOCIAL MEDIA GROW
Photo sharing and direct messaging begin reshaping online grooming.

2012 THE INTELLIGENCE GAP IS DISCOVERED
While targeting terrorist networks overseas, Nic McKinley uncovers human trafficking markets with virtually no intelligence support for investigators.

2014 DELIVERFUND IS FOUNDED
DeliverFund applies intelligence tradecraft and technology to dismantle human trafficking networks. It launches multi-jurisdiction investigations, trains law enforcement, and builds investigative technology.

2015 AN 846% INCREASE IN EXPLOITATION
NCMEC reports an 846% increase in reports of suspected child sex trafficking since 2010 as exploitation increasingly moves online.

"In combat, we didn't wait for the enemy to attack. We mapped their network, identified their logistics, and collapsed their capability before they could operate. Trafficking networks are not different from insurgent networks—they require the same systematic disruption methodology."

Nic McKinley
Founder, DeliverFund

2018 BACKPAGE BECOMES A FOCAL POINT
Nearly 75% of NCMEC trafficking reports involve online advertisements, demonstrating how the internet has become central to exploitation. Backpage is seized by authorities; its former office later becomes DeliverFund's headquarters.

2019 EMBEDDED INTELLIGENCE
DeliverFund places the nation's first embedded intelligence analyst inside a police department dedicated to human trafficking investigations.

2020 PATHFINDER LAUNCHES
DeliverFund deploys PATHFinder, transforming millions of data points into actionable investigative intelligence.

2021 BUILDING NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE
The Human Trafficking Watchlist is created, compiling convicted traffickers and known offenders into a centralized intelligence resource.

2023 ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE ENTERS THE FIGHT
DeliverFund develops its first machine learning models to accelerate investigative analysis and uncover trafficking networks faster.

2024 INTELLIGENCE AT SCALE
DeliverFund expands partnerships that place advanced data intelligence into the hands of thousands of investigators nationwide.

2025 EQUIPPING THE DIGITAL INVESTIGATOR
DeliverFund's technology, intelligence, and training now support nearly 9,000 investigators across hundreds of jurisdictions—helping law enforcement keep pace with technology-enabled trafficking.

WE DON'T RUN AWARENESS CAMPAIGNS. WE RUN INTELLIGENCE OPERATIONS.

HOW IT WORKS: Human trafficking isn't just a crime, it's a marketplace, sustained by ten repeatable, predictable transactions. DeliverFund's 10 Points of Disruption target every link in that chain: from Recruitment and Advertisement to Payment and Transport, using the same counterterrorism methodologies built to dismantle terrorist networks. By deploying advanced AI, proprietary datasets, and operators with deep intelligence backgrounds, DeliverFund arms law enforcement to put traffickers behind bars. The goal: make human trafficking so dangerous and so thoroughly surveilled that the marketplace collapses.

WE GIVE LAW ENFORCEMENT AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE.

Only law enforcement can make the arrest. Your support helps give them the intelligence to succeed, all for free.

EQUIP

We equip law enforcement with advanced technology and the world's largest counter-trafficking database; more than 6 billion data points transformed into actionable intelligence that enables earlier detection, stronger investigations, and faster intervention.

TRAIN

We train law enforcement, healthcare professionals, and communities to recognize trafficking indicators and respond with confidence, strengthening prevention, accelerating intervention, and improving outcomes for victims.

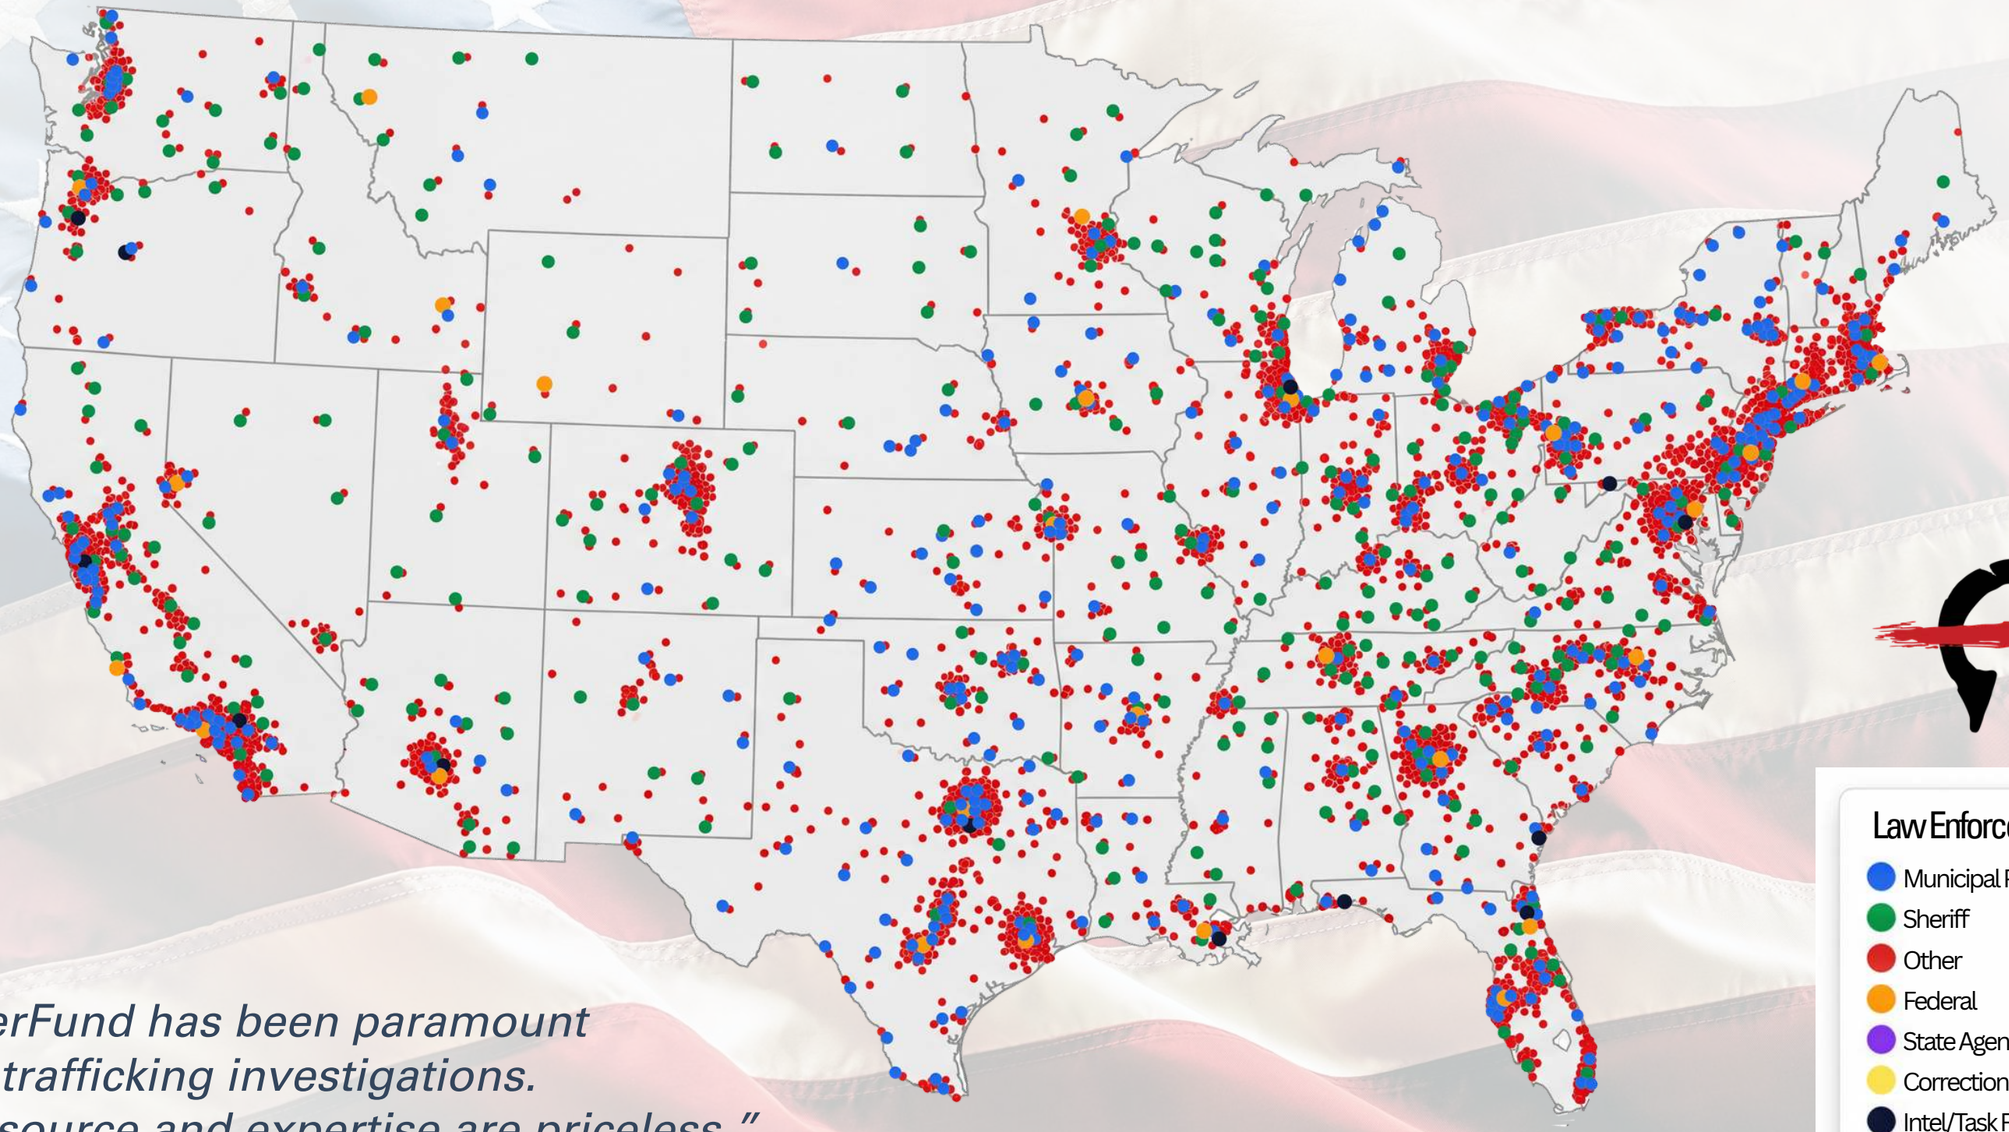

ADVISE

We advise law enforcement and the public with intelligence drawn from the world's largest analyst-curated counter-trafficking database, delivering actionable insights through platforms like RedLight Recon, PATHfinder, Whooster NightWatch, and HT Safeguard.

Arresting a trafficker leads investigators to additional victims, co-conspirators, and connected trafficking networks.

2025

How DeliverFund's wins set new national precedent in the fight against human trafficking.

San Luis Obispo County, California

In a first-of-its-kind trafficking case, a teenage survivor faced her traffickers only once while the justice system did something it had never done before. The result changed not just her future, but the playbook for how traffickers can be prosecuted in America.
(see right)

Missoula, Montana

With the help of DeliverFund, prosecutors were able to dismantle Soul Massage, an illicit massage business whose owner were convicted of both sex and labor trafficking. But this case exposed a more complex scheme. (see page 17)

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Twenty-six law enforcement personnel filed into a training room in Pittsburgh: patrol officers, investigators, analysts; each bringing a different lens to the same problem. The exercise was straightforward: find an ad you believe signals trafficking, identify the indicators, and make contact. What happened next, nobody planned. (see page 19)

Three Traffickers Three Juries One Historic Trial

She was 15 when three adults convinced her to leave Nevada for what sounded like a way out. Over the next 16 days, they moved her from city to city along California's Central Coast, selling her, controlling her, and keeping her under a constant cloud of fear. When law enforcement found her during an operation in Pismo Beach, the rescue was only the beginning. What followed became one of the most complex human trafficking prosecutions in San Luis Obispo County history, and DeliverFund was there from the start.

From day one, investigators didn't just have a traumatized child and scattered leads. They had DeliverFund's analysts and technology. While officers stabilized the victim, DeliverFund traced digital fingerprints from ads, communications, travel patterns, and open-source data. That intelligence connected three defendants to a single trafficking enterprise and gave prosecutors a clear, data-driven picture of what had happened.

Then came a constitutional challenge. Each trafficker had made statements implicating the others.

Normally, that would require three separate trials, and force the survivor to relive her trauma three times. Instead, the court did something unprecedented: three juries, one courtroom, one testimony. That approach only works when the evidence is airtight. DeliverFund's intelligence helped make it possible.

Over the months that followed, while memories faded and defense strategies shifted, the digital evidence held. DeliverFund's reports mapped movements across jurisdictions, corroborated the survivor's account, and showed each defendant's role in the trafficking operation. Prosecutors presented three juries with a single, data-backed story that traffickers couldn't explain away.

In the summer of 2025, all three juries returned guilty verdicts. Every trafficker was convicted and sentenced to state prison. The survivor testified once, told her story once, and walked away knowing every person who had exploited her was going to prison.

For San Luis Obispo County, it was a landmark legal victory. For DeliverFund donors, it was proof that the intelligence you fund doesn't just help rescue victims, it helps deliver justice. By tracking digital trails, preserving evidence, and supporting investigators from rescue through prosecution, DeliverFund helped make this historic outcome possible.

Operation: Reclaim and Rebuild 2025

DeliverFund provided intelligence and technology support that enhances law enforcement's ability to locate and dismantle trafficking networks.*

More than 80 law enforcement agencies and task forces joined California's Operation Reclaim and Rebuild, a multi-jurisdictional initiative to identify victims, arrest traffickers and sex buyers, and dismantle organized trafficking networks statewide.

During the week-long crackdown, hundreds were arrested and more than 150 victims recovered, including children as young as 13; underscoring the scale of the problem and the need for intelligence-driven responses.

Investigators from local, state, and federal agencies coordinated across city and county lines, pairing traditional investigative work with proactive, intelligence-led strategies to expose hidden networks and the digital and financial trails that keep them running.

DeliverFund supported the operation by providing intelligence and technology most local agencies lack the budget or personnel to build themselves.

Using its analyst-curated trafficking database, the largest of its kind, DeliverFund analysts fused online ads, phone numbers, emails, images, and open-source records into a clear picture of who was exploiting whom, and where.

That work connected evidence across jurisdictions, surfaced patterns that might otherwise have been missed, and helped prioritize high-value targets so officers could focus limited resources for greatest impact.

The intelligence gave investigators faster, sharper leads and real-time support as cases unfolded, contributing directly to arrests, rescues, and the disruption of trafficking networks so more victims were identified quickly, removed from danger, and given a chance to reclaim and rebuild their lives.

Trafficking and National Security

How a Trafficking Business Funneled Cash to America's Top Adversary

From the street, Soul Massage occupied an unassuming house in Missoula, Montana: a simple storefront, neon sign glowing "open," blinds mostly drawn. Inside, investigators say it operated as a brothel and trafficking hub, exploiting vulnerable women while quietly sending profits far beyond Montana's borders.

The case began with a single outcry. A woman, identified in court records only as Jane Doe, reported being assaulted inside Soul Massage. When law enforcement searched the business, they found cramped living quarters, sexual paraphernalia, and workers controlled by Yanbin Bao who held the keys to their income, housing, and safety. What appeared to be a local code violation was an organized trafficking operation.

DeliverFund's role became critical. Investigators needed more than evidence from one business, they needed to understand the network behind it. Using advanced investigative tools and the world's largest analyst-curated counter-trafficking database, DeliverFund traced digital and financial connections beyond Missoula.

The investigation revealed profits flowing first to New York City, a known hub for illicit massage businesses, and then to mainland China, linking a small-town "spa" to an international trafficking network.

That financial picture helped prosecutors show the owner wasn't operating alone but as part of a broader system built on coercion and exploitation. It also exposed how trafficking doesn't just destroy lives, it drains money from American communities into overseas criminal enterprises.

Armed with DeliverFund's intelligence, investigators mapped how victims were recruited, controlled, and exploited while documenting the movement of money through the network.

Combined with victim testimony and physical evidence, that intelligence helped prosecutors build a compelling case. The result was convictions on both sex and labor trafficking charges and a significant prison sentence for the owner. More importantly, the case sent a clear message: rural communities are not beyond the reach of organized trafficking, but neither are they beyond the reach of justice.

For DeliverFund donors, this case demonstrates the power of intelligence. Your support didn't just help close one illicit business, it helped expose and disrupt a trafficking network stretching from a small Montana storefront to an international criminal enterprise.

"Two-Girl Special"

One Silent Signal for Help

The ad offered a "two-girl special." It's a phrase analysts know to watch: language that implies multiple victims, even when the photos don't confirm it. The DeliverFund analyst flagged the advertisement, made contact, and waited.

Both women arrived at the hotel together. Officers moved in to detain them and began the process of separating them for interviews; standard protocol, and in this case, exactly the right call.

One of the women couldn't wait to be alone. She signaled to officers immediately; a look, a gesture that she needed to speak privately. When the door closed, she started talking. She had been trafficked for years. Not by a stranger. By the woman she had just walked in with, and that woman's husband.

The mechanism was debt. The couple had taken her in, given her a place to stay when she needed it most...and then started keeping score. Rent. Expenses. A number that was never fixed and never shrinking.

By her account, she believed she owed somewhere between $10,000 and $15,000, a figure they controlled and she could never escape. The only way out, they told her, was to work it off.

When she ran, and she had run more than once, they found her and brought her back. That night, she didn't have to run. Victim services were on site.

Before the night was over, she was somewhere safe, and with people who wanted nothing from her.
No debt.
No count.
No number on a whiteboard that kept climbing no matter what she did. Just a secure location, a conversation on her terms, and advocates whose only measure of success was whether she was okay.

The woman she arrived with was booked into jail; a weapon and drugs found on her, adding to the charges. A warrant went out for the husband. Both are in custody, awaiting what comes next in court.

Live Lead

A DeliverFund training revealed every team was chasing the same victim, and picked up a real trafficking trail in real time.

Twenty-six law enforcement personnel filed into a training room in Pittsburgh, patrol officers, investigators, analysts, each bringing a different lens to the same problem. The exercise was straightforward: find an ad you believe signals trafficking, identify the indicators, and make contact. What happened next, nobody planned.

Three separate groups, seated just feet apart from one another, independently zeroed in on the same advertisement. Same subject. Same case. None of them knew it.

Each group worked the lead with discipline - pulling information, building a profile, piecing together indicators. They were good. But they each had something the others didn't.

When the instructor pointed out they were all chasing the same person, the room shifted. They pulled their chairs together and started comparing notes.

What had taken each group twenty minutes to build individually collapsed into something far sharper in a matter of seconds. The case didn't just get bigger, it got faster.

Then they entered the subject into RedLight Recon. The system flagged her immediately. She was already in the database, connected to a sex trafficking case from 2022 in California. And now she was surfacing in Pittsburgh.

The room went quiet. This wasn't a training scenario anymore. This was a real person, a real history, and a real trail, and they had just picked it up.

That moment, that silence, was the lesson. Not the exercise, not the debrief. The moment they realized that the tools work, that collaboration works, and that somewhere out there, a case was still open and waiting to be closed.

JOHN WALL MEMORIAL EMBEDDED ANALYST PROGRAM

"I can say with certainty, the only effective way to uncover trafficking victims and arrest traffickers is to conduct proactive operations utilizing actionable, reliable intelligence. We accomplish this with DeliverFund."

- Sgt. John Wall

In 2025, DeliverFund's John Wall Memorial Embedded Analyst Program placed elite intelligence professionals, including former CIA, NSA, and child-crimes investigators, inside frontline law enforcement agencies.

Powered by the world's largest analyst-curated counter-trafficking database, embedded analysts transformed billions of data points into real-time intelligence, helping investigators identify traffickers faster, strengthen cases, and reduce the burden on victims.

Funded by supporters like you, this program continues to expand law enforcement's ability to uncover hidden trafficking networks and bring more victims to safety.

"Felony arrests and rescues came from DeliverFund analysts' findings."

FORCE MULTIPLIERS

Our Strategic Partnerships accelerate intelligence, amplify precision, and collapse the space where traffickers hide.

A DeliverFund analyst uses a combination of proprietary software and programs from our strategic partners to find human trafficking networks across America.

ROOK ADVISORS

Rook Advisors strengthens DeliverFund by leveraging IT expertise to streamline operations and eliminate inefficiencies, ensuring more donor dollars equip law enforcement. By enabling in-house server management and reducing costly cloud dependence, Rook delivers long-term savings and proves the private sector can be a true force multiplier against trafficking.

WHOOSTER

Whooster's NightWatch platform puts DeliverFund's 6+ billion data points directly into the hands of 9,000+ officers across 700 jurisdictions, free of charge. By fusing DeliverFund intelligence with OWL Data Fusion technology, investigators uncover hidden connections and turn fragmented leads into airtight cases in seconds. The data isn't sitting idle, it's in the field where it belongs.

HOONIFY TECHNOLOGIES

Hoonify's award-winning TurbOS™ operating system supercharges DeliverFund's intelligence capabilities, collecting data five times faster, increasing annual reports by nearly 50%, and enabling 24/7 high-performance operations. Because of Hoonify, traffickers have fewer places to hide and less time to run.

ROC

Traffickers exploit fragmented leads across jurisdictions and aliases. ROC, the only American-made multimodal biometrics and Vision AI provider trusted by the U.S. military and law enforcement, closes that gap. Integrated into DeliverFund's framework, ROC delivers cleaner data, faster validation, and the precision to identify traffickers wherever they hide.

KASEWARE

Kaseware's investigative case management platform, built by former FBI Special Agents and technologists, unifies casework, intelligence, and operations in one secure system. By powering DeliverFund's RedLight Recon environment, Kaseware helps investigators connect phone numbers, emails, and other identifiers across cases, visualize trafficking networks, and share intelligence efficiently so more traffickers are identified and prosecuted.

MY MOBILE WITNESS

My Mobile Witness expands the frontlines by turning citizens into intelligence assets through its "See Something Send Something®" platform. Their nationwide reporting system routes real-time tips to fusion centers across the country. In Pennsylvania, we've integrated DeliverFund data directly into the MMW app used by PA State Police, Pittsburgh Police, and others, because stopping traffickers is everyone's mission.
